ACCIDENT DUE TO STORM CAUSES INJURY TO MAN

Joseph Moss, 528 Locust St.,
May Have Fractured
Skull

IS IN THE HOSPITAL

Winter Stages A Comeback
Despite Early Arrival of Cardinals

One man was injured in an accident due to the storm here last night when winter staged a comeback and gave a laugh to Clarence Winter's cardinals. It was just a day or two ago when the cardinals were chirping away and hopping about. It begins to look as though the groundhog is about the only reliable weather prophet.

Joseph Moss, 528 Locust street, is in the Harriman Hospital, suffering with what might prove to be a fractured skull. X-ray pictures will be taken today to determine the extent of Moss' injuries.

Moss was driving west on Pond street, last night, at about 10.30, and it is said he turned into Mulberry street, when a truck of Edward Cohen, Brooklyn, and the Moss car collided. The truck was driven by Harry Schneider, New York.

Schneider was held in $1,000 bail by Justice of Peace James Guy to await the outcome of Moss' injuries.

The rain which began falling yesterday turned to sleet, hail and finally snow last night. The temperature yesterday when it reached the highest point stood at 51. This morning at 7 o'clock it was 20.

The sleet and hail last night brought traffic to almost a standstill. Motorists moved with great caution and trucks were greatly handicapped. Ice formed on windshields. Vision was obscured.

The snow fall was between two and three inches.

For a time last night it looked as though another blizzard had started. Highway department employees were called into action and the highways were cindered on hills, curves and at intersections.

Stationed at strategic points throughout Pennsylvania, a far-flung army of Highway Department snow fighters today stands ready at instant notice to wrest King Winter's icy grip from the state's network of highways.

While the rest of the state views winter as but a siege of discomfort, of huddling beneath overcoats and mufflers and accepting the chills and colds, steel and snow with a resigned attitude and an eye to the spring thaw, few persons are fully aware of what goes on behind the scenes to alleviate the suffering that results whenever a blanket of snow paralyzes the highways.

At headquarters in Harrisburg, Secretary of Highways Warren Van Dyke, the "general" of the snow fighters' army of several thousand bends over a large scale map of the entire highway system. Tiny flags and varicolored pins mark the trend of the weather and the condition of each section of road. Regular reports from the field keep the map up to the minute.

Thus a glance at the map can show whether the storm will get beyond a corps of workers in a certain section and if reinforcements are needed. Promptly is dispatched from nearby storage sheds to aid in the battle. Rotary snow plows, the heavy artillery, shoulder the brunt of the offensive. They lift the snow and fan it to the roadside. The other types of plows are designed only to force the snow aside into windrows.

The Department maintains approximately 100 equipment sheds and shelters throughout the State. Snow plows and trucks for cindering are

Mrs. Adam P. Smith Dies After Illness of A Year

A well-known Bristol woman, Mrs. Lottie R. Smith, wife of Adam P. Smith, died at her residence, 224 Walnut street, last night, after an illness covering a period of one year.

The deceased, who was 54 years of age, was a native of Bucks County, and had resided for practically her entire life-time in Bristol borough.

In addition to her husband, Mrs. Smith is survived by the following: daughters, Mrs. Wilbur Albright and Mrs. Anthony Pfaffenrath, Bristol; one son, Franklin Smith, Croydon; six grandchildren; two sisters and two brothers: Mrs. Matthew Lambert, Edgington; Mrs. Frances Conway, Bristol; Charles Yates, Portland, Me.; John Grockett, Philadelphia.

An active worker in the Bristol Methodist Church and Sunday School, both of which she was a member, Mrs. Smith was also affiliated with Bristol Council, Daughters of America; and Camp 89, P. O. of A. In the latter organization she was secretary for a number of years.

ARRESTS IN BORO' DURING '34 SHOWED DECREASE FROM '33

Officers More Vigilant During
Past Year in Curbing Auto Violations

LODGERS DECREASED

Street Lights Reported Out
Show Considerable Increase
For 12 Months

Much of interest is brought out by comparative figures of the activities of the police department for the years 1933 and 1934. For instance it is shown that the officers in 1933 made 43 more arrests than they did in 1934, which would indicate that crime is decreasing in Bristol borough. The officers in 1934 were more vigilant in curbing automobile violations, and 10 more motor vehicle drivers were arrested in the 12 month period just past, than in the previous 12-month period.

Bristol police in 1933 made a total of 188 arrests for various crimes committed here, while in 1934 they made 146 arrests. In 1933 only seven persons were charged with automobile violations, while in 1934 there were 17 taken into custody charged with the motor vehicle code. The lists of crimes in the two years were practically the same.

There was a decided decrease in the number of lodgers given shelter in the municipal building overnight during 1934 from the number cared for in 1933. The total number of lodgers sheltered in 1933 was 1587; while the number in 1934 was 1056, showing a decrease of 531. Merchants in 1934 gave more care to the locking of their places of business, as is indicated by the fact that in that year police officers found 21 doors open after hours, while in 1933 there were 27.

There was a decided increase in the number of street lights reported out by police officers in 1934. One of the duties of a policeman as he makes his patrol is to report to headquarters the street lights which are out on his beat. The desk sergeant at police headquarters immediately notifies the Philadelphia Electric Company and the light is supposed to be replaced. The number of street lights reported out by police officers during 1934 was 298, which was 88 more than in 1933 when the total was 210. The street lights have three classifications, small, arc, and bridge lights. In 1933 134 small lights were reported out, and in 1934 the number was 191, or an increase of 57. In 1933 there were 66 arc lights reported out while in 1934 the number was 94 or an increase of 28. Three more bridge lights were reported out in 1934 than in 1933 when the number was 10.

The value of property stolen in Bristol borough in 1933 was $1649, while the value of property stolen in 1934 is given as $1953.25, which is $304.25 more than in 1933. The police recovered stolen property valued at $1369.50 last year, or $120 more than in 1933 when the value of the stolen property recovered was $1249.50.

COMMUNICATION

Dear Stroller:
So Clarence Winter's cardinals are a harbinger of Spring?
Well, in the 700 block, Radcliffe street, we have had four cardinals all Winter! During the snow they lived in our back yard. Last Winter, all Winter, we had eight. If the small boys would only leave them alone; but no, sling shots and small boys go together, chasing the red bird.

You would do a good turn by lecturing the children on birds and squirrels.

MISS VERA A. SCHNEIDER

Lecturer-Demonstrator, Who is Conducting the Courier's Cooking and Home-Makers' School Here for Three Days

MEN WILL BE GLAD FOR WOMEN TO GO TO SCHOOL

As They Will Derive Benefits
From the Excellent Dishes
Prepared

FOR BALANCED DIETS

The men of the household will be pleased to have their wives attend the Bristol Courier cooking schools this afternoon as well as Thursday and Friday afternoons. The reasons for this are: The home-makers will learn to make more appetizing dishes; better balanced meals; how to feed the family in a more pleasing but likewise more economic way; and the time given to meal preparation will be less than ever.

The women who attend this cooking school at Mutual Aid Hall, Wood street, between Jefferson and Lincoln avenues, will be better prepared to cater to their families' needs as far as the culinary art is concerned. They will be taught much about the combination of foods for desired menus, and how to properly balance meals for best results physically.

Short cuts to the dinner table will be shown, and this is most important in this day and age, when women entertain more extensively, and when so much time is needed to devote to affairs outside the home.

All is in readiness for this afternoon's session, and the instructor, and demonstrator, Miss Vera A. Schneider, is expecting a banner crowd from Bristol borough, the townships, and surrounding towns.

The cooks who seek to learn more about their art will be given pointers on the use of "left-over" dishes, and will receive some prized recipes.

Recipes are free as is the demonstration. Other things that will be free each day will be ten bags of food and household items, as well as tasty things which Miss Schneider will make during her classes.

Remember the hour is two p. m., this afternoon and Thursday and Friday afternoons.

Advice is given to be at the hall early so that time may be available for viewing the articles displayed in the booths and upon the stage by local merchants and manufacturers who are co-operating with The Bristol Courier in staging the three days' sessions.

Girls' Friendly Admission Service Very Impressive

EDGELEY, Feb. 27.—A candlelight admission service for the candidates of the Girls' Friendly Society was observed in St. Paul's Episcopal Church, Sunday evening.

Nineteen candidates were admitted, and included: Doris Nickerson, Shirley Nickerson, Zelma Waltrick, Grace Waltrick, Nora Parr, Irma Dunbar, Esther Dunbar, Anita Locke, Doris Worthington, Bernardine Coyle; Julia Palowicz, Lydia Wright, Alma Wright, Aline Wright, Helen Freas, Gertrude Freas, Venora Bleakley, Elizabeth Wilson, Joyce Evans.

At the altar were presented seven candles of various hues, each representing different phases of the Christian life, such as friendliness, innocence, courage, purity. These were placed on the altar and from them lighted a large candle representing the Girls' Friendly Society. From the latter every member of the society lighted her own candle and then took up positions in the edifice, symbolizing the individual taking her light from the Christ and going into her own sphere to let her light shine forth.

The service of admission followed with the 26 girls being admitted as candidates, and the older ones as members. All gave their pledge of allegiance to the ideals of the Girls' Friendly Society.

The following were admitted as members by the society: Chaplain, Rev. James Gilbert; Violet Hilgendorf, Esther Locke, Dorothy Dunbar, Gertrude Dunbar, Margaret Nickerson, Mrs. Dunbar, Mrs. Rigger.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Holsneck, Otter street, had as guests the latter part of the week, Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Holsneck and daughter, Beatrice, Elizabeth, N. J.

N. R. A. SUFFERS DEFEAT

Wilmington, Del., Feb. 27.—The N. R. A. suffered a major defeat today in the long awaited decision in the celebrated Weirton Steel case involving collective bargaining provision as embodied in Section 7-A of the N. I. R. A. Federal Judge John P. Nields denied the injunction sought by the Government to enjoin the Weirton Steel Company from allegedly violating the labor section of the Code of Fair Competition for the iron and steel industry. The suit was dismissed.

In an 85-page opinion, Judge Nields said:

"There is no showing on the part of the Plaintiff warranting the Court in issuing an injunction. Section 7-A as applied to the defendant and its business is unconstitutional and void."

Continuing, the Court said: "By a clear preponderance of evidence this Court finds the plan of employees' representation in effect upon employees of the defendant, offers a lawful and effective organization of employees for collective bargaining through representatives of their own choosing; that in all respects it complies with provisions of Section 7-A of the National Industrial Recovery Act and Section 1, Article 4 of the Steel Code; that in all respects it is directly operated and conducted by defendant employees and is not dominated, or controlled by the defendant or its agents."

The decision struck at the government's right, depression or not, to interfere in a business which cannot be classified as "interstate."

Under the caption "conclusions from the evidence," the opinion read:

"The manufacturing operations conducted by the defendant in its various plants, or mills, do not constitute interstate commerce. Relations between the defendant and its employees, do not effect interstate commerce. The manufacturing is a co-operative enterprise. Production in quantity and quality, and consequent wages, salaries and dividends depend upon a sympathetic co-operation of management and workmen. Relations acceptable and satisfactory to both workmen and management is an essential feature of the enterprise. If satisfactory, the Court will not disturb it."

Witness is Asked If Any Promises Were Made for His Testimony — "I Am Not Selling Out Farrell and Wiley," Eckert Snaps in Reply—Not Promised A Thing, He Says

DOYLESTOWN Feb. 27.—Denial that he was "selling out" his underworld pals to save his own life, was made on the witness stand here today by Robert J. Eckert, self-confessed opium smoker and a member of the notorious band once ruled by Robert Mais and Walter Legenza, recently executed in Richmond, Va., for the slaying of a mail truck driver.

Shortly before the noon recess today, Judge Boyer again instructed the jury not to talk to anyone about this case and to remain in a body. He said he would be pleased to secure information if possible of anyone talking to jury.

Turning State's evidence, Eckert, awaiting trial on a similar charge in the slaying of William Weiss, "put the finger" on Martin Farrell and his brother-in-law, Frank Riley, two of five long-term prisoners who escaped from the Eastern Penitentiary through the city sewerage system last July.

Recalled to the stand today, Eckert was put through a grueling ordeal of cross-examination by defense counsel.

In his direct testimony he had related how the abduction had been planned by the defendant's two gang chieftains, blaming Wiley and Legenza for firing the fatal shot.

"What were you promised in exchange for your testimony?" the witness was asked.

"I am not selling out Farrell and Wiley, if that is what you mean," he snapped back, his eyes ablaze with anger.

"I have not been promised a thing by the State or anyone else for telling what I know about this case. I am not trying to save my own skin at their expense."

The testimony at yesterday afternoon's session was as follows:

Mrs. Lena Weiss recalled by the State. She said her husband's car was in the garage at 11 p. m. but that the doors were open. She said she found her husband's hat on the ground and some newspapers lying on the ground. She said she found a jar of "Noxzema" and some shaving cream.

"Are you sure it was not a can of opium that you saw?" defense attorney Achey asked.

"I don't know what you mean," Mrs. Weiss replied.

"Your husband was a bootlegger, was he not?" Achey asked.

"He sold some sort of brand of whiskey," Mrs. Weiss, who had been recalled, answered.

"Your husband was engaged in the sale of opium or narcotics, was he not?" Achey continued.

"Not since we were married," she answered. "I don't know where my husband's office was located down town."

"Regardless of what his business was they had no reason to kill my husband," Mrs. Weiss answered.

"Is it not true that your husband was a narcotic addict?" Achey asked the widow. The question was objected to and sustained.

"Did you ever hear of Buck Mayer?" Achey asked.

"Yes, he was in business with my husband as some kind of salesman," Albert C. (Buck) Mayer, business partner of Weiss, 45, took the stand Tuesday afternoon.

"I am a whiskey salesman," Mayer said. "I got to the Weiss home at midnight, October 26, and Weiss was not there, but his car was there. I found two packages in his garage, a box of shaving cream and a jar of Noxzema."

"I read some letters that were written by Weiss after October 26," Mayer said.

The defense then questioned the witness as to his knowledge of Weiss' handwriting.

"I received two letters from Weiss after he was kidnapped and I received four or five telephone calls from a man who identified himself as 'D. F.' or 'D. M.'"

"As a result of a conversation on night of November 5, I went to 17th and Westmoreland streets, Philadelphia," Mayer testified.

The defense objected.

Eastburn stated that he proposed to show that on the night in question, $8,000 was paid to Mayer as ransom money.

"Did you take any money with you to 17th and Westmoreland?"

"Yes, I took $12,000 with me," Mayer answered.

"Then I went to 11th and Rising Sun avenue," Mayer said. "There was $8,000 in one package and $4,000 in another. I had the money on the front seat of the automobile. An hour later I saw a person on 11th street above Rising Sun avenue who called 'Hell, Buck,' and I turned around and the same voice said, 'Where is the money?' He got 25 feet from me and I saw part of his face."

"The man had a mustache and he was about 5 feet 10 inches and weighed about 145 pounds. I talked with him a few seconds and then I walked away."

"Are you able to say whether any of the two defendants look like the man you saw that night?" District Attorney Eastburn asked Mayer.

"No, neither of them looked like the man I talked with," Mayer answered. The State finished with Mayer at this point. No questions were asked by the defense.

Robert James Eckert, 38, indicted in this case for murder, accessory after the fact and aiding in secreting a kidnapped person was called as a Commonwealth witness. He said he lived at 1422 Toronto street, Philadelphia.

"I have known Wiley five weeks. After his escape from 'pen' and I met Farrell the same time," Eckert testified. "I first met them on 2600 block on Sterner street. I also knew Mrs. Beatrice Wilkinson. I knew Walter Legenza and Robert Howard Mais ten days after our escape."

"I met them at my house in September, 1934, or October, after Mais and Legenza escaped from Virginia. I saw them in my home."

"Mais, Legenza, Wiley and Farrell lived together at 115 Walnut avenue, Torresdale Manor, Bucks County, after October, 1934. Farrell and Wiley went there first. Mrs. Wilkinson and her children were there too. Then Mais and Legenza came up and lived there too. I was with Mrs. Wilkinson when she picked out the house in Torresdale Manor."

"There were five rooms downstairs in that house. I often went there and I saw four men there. The four men asked me if I could borrow a car and they asked me if I could pick out a route from Torresdale Manor to 69th street in Philadelphia without going through Philadelphia proper. This conversation took place at Torresdale Manor in October and I gave the route to Mais, Legenza, Farrell and Wiley. Harry Seibel, another defendant in the case helped pick out the route."

"I heard the fellows talk about kidnapping Weiss. They decided the best time to get Weiss was about 11 o'clock at night."

"Several days later, after I came back from New York, Mais, Legenza, Farrell and Wiley bawled me out for staying away a couple of nights."

"Legenza said to me, 'We tried to grab off Big Nose the other night and lost our way and we want you to direct us to Weiss' place.'"

"I did drive to 63rd and Girard avenue and Farrell, Wiley, Mais and Legenza followed me. I drove to Conshohocken and then headed for the Main Line. I stopped the car and Mais told us to wait ten minutes. We went to a lunch wagon and came back. Mais and Legenza then hailed us and hollered 'O. K.' and I started back. Mais was driving the other car and I was ahead."

"Mais tooted his horn and I stopped my car. Farrell came up to me and told me that they had snatched Big Nose who put up quite a fight. They told me they had Big Nose in the car."

"I saw three other men in addition to Farrell, in the car."

"Seibel and I went home after directing the rest to Torresdale. I told Farrell on the road that I didn't want Seibel to know that Weiss was kidnapped because we couldn't get the car any more."

FARM MIGRATION TRENDS

The lure of the good, and often not-so-good, earth seems to be a fairly perennial one to great hosts of persons striving for material establishment. There are the impractical, city-backgrounded idealists who vision farm life in merely mellow outlines; and there are the circumstance-driven, not more practical hordes who are willing to bet their last resource on getting somewhere by settling down on the soil. The man with the hoe, however, observes such adventitious farmers with an admixture of amused wonder and compassion, concerned as he is with the insistent complications of his long accustomed occupation.

Prof. Kenneth Hood of Cornell sees something epochal in the back-to-the-land movement of over 2,000,000 persons who have been deserting the cities in the past two years in the sanguine expectation that, putting an ear close to the ground in the country, they might find a re-assuring answer to their economic difficulties. Prof. Hood finds this rustic hegira surpassing in significance the great migrations of history as well as the transport of American troops to France. It appears that the university has conducted somewhat of a survey among these get-busy-quick farmers, unfolding various interesting factors of consideration; such as their prior diversity of occupation, their almost universal inexperience with the most incidental farm work, the meagerness of their investment, productivity and profit, and the outstanding fact that "most of the part-time farmers interviewed were obtaining practically all of their income from outside work."

Such discoveries are not surprising to anyone who has had any acquaintance with farm life. Aside from the consideration that farming is one of the most rigorous and painstaking of all occupations, it seems to require a more complex adaptability than any manual form of enterprise for profit, with a good business head one of the prerequisites. Successful farmers are probably as a rule not made in one generation. Imbued with the pioneering spirit and the urge of self-preservation, numerous venturers may manage to eke out an existence of a sort on the land, but rarely in terms of commercial success. Almost any return on their efforts is heightened with a sense of romantic appreciation; and unnecessary, circuitous efforts to bring about results are made at a most laborious rate. The indisputable returns are, of course, a roof and shelter from the elements, but the fruits of the soil are usually of a precious yield, on a par with nuggets in a gold mine.

SYNOPSIS

Jasper Ingram, wealthy promoter, takes his secretary, lovely Cathleen, McCarthy, to his "Grangelands" estate so he can transact business while attending the charity garden party given by his wife, Laura. Cathleen, the sole support of a large family, is fascinated by the surrounding luxury and wishes she could attend the party. Marian Alspaugh, the gold-digging wife of Homer Alspaugh, Ingram's confidential secretary, is cigarette girl at the fete.

CHAPTER VII

Marian was near the booth where tickets for the mystery trips were sold. In front of it were two men, to one of whom she already had sold half-a-dozen packs of cigarettes at a thousand per cent profit. She looked the nerve to press him further, but the other looked promising, and she took a step towards him.

"But have you no tickets for Spain?" he was asking the girl in the booth. "I am in love with your Long Island and I do not wish to leave it unless to return to my Spain!"

"The girl laughed and explained: 'Don't you see, these are mystery trips! The whole point is, you don't know where you're going when you buy a ticket! It's a surprise! Don't you want to take a chance—and get a surprise?'"

Marian pounced on him. "Always a mistake to make important decisions in a hurry. Buy some cigarettes and think it over while you smoke."

He was a strikingly handsome man, with full black eyes and the features of a Greek statue, slightly thickened. His expression was faintly brutal and, to her, attractive.

"If you will please sell me some cigarettes very cheap I will take your advice. I am a very poor refugee—the republicans in Spain have stolen my estates. If we were in Spain, I would give you a hundred pesetas for this box—Alas, I must ask you to tell me your minimum price!"

"Nothing to you," she said daintily. "And are you really a refugee? I thought refugees were all Russians?"

"Have you not heard, then, that Don Alfonso was driven from his throne?"

"Yes, of course. I remember now. Oh, are you a grandee? How perfectly thrilling if you are!"

"Ignacio Miguel Carlos Esteban d'Alhues y Silva, I present myself, with your permission—Marques d'Alhues and Grandee of Spain—alas, my poor Spain!"

"You thrill me to death, Marques d'Alhues. May I light your cigarette?"

"You have few cigarettes left," he said after thanking her for a light.

"Nearly all gone, but what I have in here—" She tapped the little money box. "I've earned a rest, don't you think?"

Contentedly he sat on a stone bench beside her and they smoked, looked at each other out of the corners of their eyes, and laughed at nothing.

"I think it would be nice if you would come to this make-believe Spain with me," d'Alhues suggested. "Ah, what a beautiful dream—if it were only reality! But let us go to the pretend Spain—since the other is impossible."

"Sorry," said the girl in the booth, "but I'm afraid it's too late. The theatricians start at once, and everyone's going over there."

It was true, people were beginning to drift towards the amphitheatre. Marian sprang to her feet feeling guilty, as her eyes encountered those of her hostess, who, with others, was approaching, and Marian thought, looking at her rather coldly, "Thanks I shouldn't take time off to rest," she told herself and plunged back into her selling campaign with nervous zeal, leaving d'Alhues, on whom Laura Ingram smiled now that he was alone.

Chairs were arranged in rows on the semi-circular terrace facing the stage, a smooth stretch of lawn backed by fir. A line of dwarf sunflowers simulated footlights.

Debutantes, who had studied eurhythmics, trooped off after dancing in Greek tunics that revealed their sun-browned shapely limbs. Two small boys, pages, appeared with placards announcing the last number, a one-act skit in which Arline Martin was to play the lead.

Seward sat on the edge of his seat, trembling, hardly able to breathe. This was the moment for which he had been waiting. His mother, one seat to the left in the row in front of him, turned and said:

"Wasn't that perfectly charming, Seward? As graceful as the Albertina Raach girls, weren't they?"

"Yes, mother. Corking," he said dutifully.

"And wasn't Millicent sweet?" She smiled meaningfully. To d'Alhues actors. Then he made for Arline.

"You were great," he told her in a voice that shook. "You were marvelous. You were absolutely magnificent!"

"Sweet of you—" she murmured absently.

Her eyes were roving over the breaking ranks of the crowd. She hadn't dared look at it before, for fear of getting out of her part.

Who was here that mattered, that was what she wanted to find out—and what had he thought of her work? In the audience she could see no one whose face meant anything to her.

She felt terribly let down, disappointed. She had built high hopes on this afternoon's performance, worked hard—had it all gone for nothing? Then she saw Jasper Ingram, deliberately making his way towards her. Instantly a lovely dewy smile of surprised delight transformed her face.

"Why, I'm only a little beginner," she said modestly to Seward's babbling praise. "Of course, I do feel my parts. I nearly forgot, just now, that I was Arline Martin."

She had carefully timed this artless little speech and had hardly ended it when Seward said, "I want to introduce my father." There was just a touch of confusion in her manner as she looked up at the only man at Grangelands who could further her ambitions.

"May I tell you how much I liked your work, Miss Martin?" Jasper Ingram said.

Arline spoke a little breathlessly. "Oh, Mr. Ingram, did you really think it—promising? Please tell me. I should be so grateful for your sincere criticism."

"I assure you I don't feel in the least critical—"

"As if there was anything to criticize!" Seward snorted. "You were just perfect—"

But Arline no longer had any ears for Seward. His father's manner, too, rather shouldered the boy out of the conversation; he could not have said quite how it was done, but presently his father and Arline were strolling off together and he was left alone on the grassy stage, facing the disordered rows of empty chairs beyond the low line of dwarf sunflowers.

Eckert Re-Called To Stand in Murder Trial

"After the kidnapping I went to Torresdale Manor every other day. I saw Weiss upstairs on one occasion, on a Sunday. Legenza and Farrell were in the room at the time. Wiley and Mais were downstairs. A letter was being dictated by Legenza to Wiley.

"Wiley and Mais would guard Weiss for a time and Farrell and Legenza usually at night. Mrs. Wilkinson was always there.

"I first seen the fish-plates at a railroad siding at Broad and Indiana avenue. I got them myself. I got them because the others told me they saw Weiss trying to get some guns that were on the third floor and they asked me to get some weights and wire. Legenza told me to get some wire, that they were going to throw Weiss overboard.

"On the night of November 5th, I saw Wiley, Coffey, Miss Keever and others at my house and they told me they had a deal with 'Buck' Mayer for 17th and Westmoreland.

At the direction of Wiley and Mais I made a telephone call to Lena Weiss using initials 'D. F.' for identification, which I always used. They told me to ask why Big Buck was not there. This call was made at 11 o'clock. Wiley and Mais asked me what Lena said. Mrs. Weiss told me Buck was still over there ever since the appointment was made.

"Later the same night, Mais and Wiley came back to my house and Mais had a package with brown wrapping. The package was opened in my house and it contained $8000 counted by Mais and Wiley in fives, tens, fifties and hundreds.

"They were $4000 short and Mais and Wiley left in a cab for bungalow. Matt Barrett went with them. I went back to bungalow with Coffey. It was after 12 o'clock. Farrell, Legenza, Mrs. Wilkinson was there and Weiss was upstairs.

"I saw Mais and Wiley bring the money to the bungalow, and when they came in there was a conversation.

"I left and drove down to Frankford avenue to get some cats. We got back to the bungalow and Mais, Legenza, Farrell, Wiley and Barrett were there. Weiss was not there then.

"Then in the bedroom the money was divided and I got $500, Matt Barrett got $600, Mrs. Wilkinson got $400 and Coffey got $600. Wiley, Mais, Legenza and Farrell got $1500.

"I heard a conversation at the bungalow between Wiley, Farrell, Mais and Legenza, when they said 'we had a tough time fastening the fish-plates to Big Nose and had to stop the car and fasten them on in the road.'

The defense objected to the fact that witness said "four men made the statement," but the objection was over-ruled.

"The first shot was fired by Legenza and the second by Wiley, Mais told me," Eckert continued. "At the time, Wiley, Farrell and Legenza were present.

"Just before I was getting ready to go and I was handed Wiley's gun, Wiley told me to throw it overboard and I threw it into Poquessing Creek along the Frankford Pike."

Eastburn then showed Eckert a pistol for identification. He said it was the pistol that Wiley gave him.

"Before I tossed pistol into Creek I too chambered out," Eckert continued. "Two weeks ago I pointed out to County Detective Russo the spot where I tossed the pistol.

"I went back to Philadelphia and Farrell and Wiley stayed with me for a week at my house.

"Wiley told me that he hated to kill the man in cold blood, that he fired the first shot and Legenza fired the second shot.

"After a week was over Wiley and Farrell went to Sixth street, north, where they lived a couple of weeks, I guess. I saw Mais and Legenza there about a week later.

"Sure, I knew that Weiss had a diamond ring. I got the stone from Legenza the night we got back from getting the beer. I took the stone home and hit it and later I pointed out to officers where the stone was hidden."

The witness then identified the Weiss diamond that was produced in a bottle by the District Attorney.

"Wiley told me the two shots were fired near the bridge on the State Road," Eckert continued. "Farrell told me that Weiss was actually killed on the road and not in the house."

After nearly three hours of direct examination by Eastburn, defense counsel Achey commenced cross-examination at 4:20 p. m.

"You are known as Putty Nose or Flat Nose, are you not," Achey asked Eckert.

"You are the first one who ever called me that, you can call me anything you want," Eckert replied.

Eckert then admitted that he has been arrested a number of times, and was once acquitted of murdering an Italian on North 16th street, Philadelphia, several years ago.

Achey first cross-examined Eckert. "The Torresdale Manor bungalow was rented in early October, 1934," Eckert continued.

HAPPINESS RECIPE

SENENCA, Kan.—(INS.)—Here's how to be happy though married: "Be silent when your wife is angry," advises August Haeffle.

"Never start anything," adds Mrs. Haeffle.

Mr. and Mrs. Haeffle have been married 60 years.

"We've never quarrelled," they say.

SANG ON SCAFFOLD

BELGRADE—(INS.)—A lively drinking song was cut short in Belgrade prison when sentence of death was carried out on Dragutin Nikolic, who had been convicted of two brutal murders. Nikolic sang a sentimental love song as he walked to the scaffold and burst into the drinking song during his last few minutes.

ELASTIC GLASS

LONDON—(INS.)—Glass that can be bent, cut, chiselled and moulded into the finest shapes, is being produced by members of the Imperial Chemical Industries. This new material is a plastic derived from ordinary coal tar. "CAT-BURGERS"

BELGRADE—(INS.)—Wealthy people of Zagreb are suffering from a wave of kidnapping—the objects of which are their pet cats and dogs. The criminals mark down the spoiled pets of the richest people, and every day one or the other of them vanishes and the bereaved owner receives a curt request for a large sum of money as ransom. Animals valuable in themselves are sometimes sold again, if the police are informed of the loss the animals are usually killed and never seen again.

THEIR OWN IDEA

TOKIO—(INS.)—Theft after theft, and, they agreed to gather at the temple and cast votes to decide the identity of the thief. Chichi Oyama and his wife Momiko got the largest number of votes and were declared the criminals. It was they who had first posed the ballot should be held.

OVEN DINNER USED FOR DEMONSTRATION AT COOKING SCHOOL

Recipes used the first day by Miss Vera A. Schneider at the Cooking and Home-makers' School sponsored by the Bristol Courier:

Oven Dinner—prepared in class
Felin's Virginia style baked ham
Shredded String beans
Potato balls
Pineapple steaks
Banana Cake

Banana Cake
1/2 cupful shortening
1 1/2 cupfuls sugar
2 eggs—well beaten
2 cupfuls Ceresota not bleached flour

1/2 teaspoonful baking powder
3/4 teaspoonful soda
1/2 teaspoonful salt
1/2 cupful sour milk
1 cupful mashed bananas
(2 or 3 bananas)
1 teaspoonful vanilla
1 cupful Cream—whipped and sweetened
2 bananas—sliced

Cream shortening and add sugar gradually. Stir in eggs. Sift flour, baking powder, soda and salt together. Combine sour milk and bananas and add alternately with dry ingredients to cream mixture. Add vanilla, pour into greased layer cake pans and bake 30 minutes in a moderate oven—375 degrees F. When layers are cold, put together with whipped cream and sliced bananas, and spread whipped cream over top of cake. Garnish with slices of banana. Makes 2 eight inch layers.

Pineapple Steaks

Dry slices of canned pineapple, then dip in melted butter and toss in shredded coconut, covering pineapple thoroughly. Place slices in a shallow baking dish and bake in a 375 degree oven from 8 to 10 minutes. If desired, boil sirup left in can until reduced to half, then add 1 1/2 tablespoonfuls of Grenadine and pour over pineapple steaks when serving.

Graham Nut Bread

35 Graham Crackers—rolled fine
1/2 cupful sugar
2 eggs—slightly beaten
1 cupful milk
3 teaspoonfuls baking powder
1/4 teaspoonful salt
1 cupful chopped walnut meats
Cream together the sugar and eggs. Combine graham crackers, salt and baking powder and add to cream mixture alternately with the milk. Add the nut meats last and pour into a well greased loaf pan and bake in a moderate oven (375) for forty-five minutes.

Lemon Surprise Pudding

2 cupfuls Freihofer's bread cubes
1 1/2 lemons—juice and rind
1/2 cupful water
2 eggs—separated
3/4 cupful sugar
1/3 cupful butter
The bread cubes should be fresh and only inside of loaf used. Pour cold water over grated rind and let it stand. Cream butter and sugar together and add beaten egg yolks. Mix lemon juice with grated rind and water and either add to bread cubes or add alternately with cubes to butter mixture. In either case add liquid carefully to avoid separation of butter into little particles. Should this happen, however, it will not spoil the pudding. Turn into a buttered baking dish and bake in a moderate (350) oven for about 25 minutes. Remove from oven, cover with meringue made with egg whites and 4 tablespoonfuls sugar and return to slower (300) oven for 12 minutes to brown meringue. Serve cold. Very rich and delicious pudding.

Luncheon Muffins

1 1/2 tablespoonfuls butter
1/4 cupful sugar
1 egg—well beaten
1 cupful tomato juice
1 1/4 cupfuls Ceresota not bleached flour
1/2 teaspoonful salt
1/4 teaspoonful soda
3 teaspoonfuls baking powder
Cream butter and sugar, add well beaten egg and beat thoroughly. Mix and sift dry ingredients and add to creamed butter mixture alternately with tomato juice. Turn into well greased muffin tins and bake in a hot (400) oven for about twenty-five minutes.

Crabmeat and Egg Noodles Au Gratin

8 ounces Krumm's egg noodles
1 can crab meat—shredded
paprika
1 package grated yellow cheese
White Sauce
2 cupfuls milk
2 tablespoonfuls butter
2 tablespoonfuls Ceresota not bleached flour
1/4 teaspoonful salt
dash of pepper

Cook egg noodles in boiling salted water. Drain. Put layer of egg noodles and crabmeat in greased baking dish. Repeat until dish is almost full, having egg noodles on top. Add two-thirds package of cheese to white sauce and pour over egg noodles mixture. Sprinkle top with paprika and remaining cheese. Bake in a moderate oven 15 or 20 minutes.

LANGHORNE TRIUMPHS OVER THE BRISTOL HIGH

By Jack Orr
Bristol High brought their 1935 basketball campaign to an unsuccessful close, last evening, as they bowed to the Langhorne High five 23-20 in a Lower Bucks County League fray on the local high school court.

The Cardinal and Gray wound up with a record of six victories and two reverses, the worst average furnished since Coach "Bill" Dougherty took over the reins of the Bristol club three years ago.

Freezing the ball in the closing minutes won the ball game for the Red and Blue passers last night. With two minutes of play left the Langhorne quintet eluded the attempts of the Cardinal and Gray to gain possession of the apple and coasted through to triumph.

Nick Vitale, elusive forward of the visiting five, duplicated his trick of garnering points in the last Bristol-Langhorne clash and accounted for five double-deckers for ten tallies.

Vitale was the mainstay of the Langhorne attack and caged his shots from all angles. Nick seems to be another candidate for all-league honors. The mentors will pick their all-star array next week at the meeting of the Lower Bucks League.

Coach Howard Beck's pupils pulled away from the Bunnies from the opening and rolled up a 13-8 advantage as the half time gun went off. The Red and Blue finally broke a 20-20 deadlock as Johnnie Ross made his gift shot count. Vitale followed it up with a twin pointer and this margin sufficed for victory.

Charlie Hughes matched Vitale's 5 field goals to lead the Cardinal and Gray club. Harry Berry contributed six tallies and Dom Sagolia accounted for the remaining four counters.

The Bristol passers failed to convert a single foul throw in eight attempts while the visiting five made three for eleven chances at the 15-foot mark.

Coach Tom Cole's Jayvee five wound up their season with five victories and a pair of defeats by rolling over Langhorne J. V., 15-5.

Accident Due To Storm Causes Injury To Man

held in readiness for instant use. A sleet storm is noted and the men are ordered out for clundering. Snow begins, and the crews report for duty at a depth of one inch. At two inches they begin a patrol, up and down the roads in each district, continuing until the storm subsides and the roads are made passable.

Snow removal is a costly item in the Commonwealth buds. Already $1,900,000 has been expended this winter the recent fall, the heaviest in several years, was expected to cost more than $400,000. Several weeks of possible severe weather are still to be contended with.

The system of snow removal on the State's highways dates back to World War days when heavy shipments of military supplies and munitions overtaxed the railroads. Trucks were pressed into service to relieve the congestion. Undergoing slow development at first, the system attained its present day features by 1927 when the increased mileage of surfaced roads made additional snow removal facilities almost imperative.
